Farmed Animal Welfare:
Changing Laws,
Changing Public Perceptions
and the Massachusetts Ballot Initiative

David J. Wolfson, J.D.
Adjunct Professor, New York University School of Law
Partner, Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy

Tuesday, March 1st at Noon

Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine at Tufts University
Varis Lecture Hall (VLH)

Members of the public are invited to this free seminar

Join us remotely!
http://vet.tufts.edu/capp/animal_matters/

David J. Wolfson is a partner in the Global Corporate Department of Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy LLP, and an adjunct professor at the New York University School of Law where he teaches a seminar in Animal Law, and NYU where he teaches animal protection and public policy to undergraduates as part of the Animal Studies Initiative at NYU. He has also taught animal law at Harvard Law School and Columbia Law School, and will be teaching a Farmed Animal Law class at Harvard Law School in the Fall of 2016. He is a graduate of Columbia School of Law where he was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar. He is the author of a number of articles on animal law, with a focus on farmed animal issues, and was involved in ballot initiatives on farmed animal issues in Florida, Arizona and California. He currently represents The Humane Society of the United States, Compassion in World Farming and Mercy For Animals, among other public interest organizations.

Made possible by the generous support of:
Elizabeth A. Lawrence Endowed Fund

The Center for Animals and Public Policy (CAPP) advances research, policy analysis, education and service pertaining to the important roles animals play in society, and explores the ethical implications of the human-animal relationship.

vet.tufts.edu/capp